Atlas of Contemporary Networks

http://www.ivorwilliams.info/projects/project-b

We live in an era of complex technological environments disguised under the constant promise of a simplicity at ease. The systems we live in and which shape our everyday actions are designed to be perceived as magic boxes, where we don't need to understand anything of their internal functioning. Systems that overlap and combine which are able to produce their own consequences without any human intervention.